LAS MIL Y UNA NOCHES

SYNOPSIS

While Sherezade's work seems to be going quite well, her personal life is severely affected by her son's illness.

When a bone marrow donor finally appears, things seem to improve, but the high cost of the treatment leads Sherezade to go to Burhan, her late husband's father, a conservative millionaire who never approved of her marriage and who also blames her for his son's death. When Burhan refuses to lend her the money, she decides to go to her boss at the construction company, where she has only been working for three months.

Onur Askal, a successful businessman, who does not trust women and whose favorite story is OneThousand and One Nights (Las Mil y Una noches), agrees to help her on the condition that she spend one night with him.
